Method of Competition

- A. Eighteen teams will be separated into six groups of three teams. Each group will compete in a round robin competition with the top two teams advancing into the single elimination brackets.
- B. The teams will be seeded into the brackets based on their overall performance in the round robin.
- C. The four teams with the best overall performance in the round robin matches will be seeded in quarter-final brackets as illustrated below.
- D. The remaining eight teams will be seeded in the pigtail brackets, with the best four seeded in the top brackets of each pigtail starting from top to bottom. The next best four teams will be seeded in the lower bracket of each pigtail starting from top to bottom.
- E. Overall rankings/tie breaks will be determined in the order of the following criteria. Where the criteria is equal, each subsequent criteria will be considered until the tie is broken:
 1. Number of team wins.
 2. Team with the greatest number of sweeps (all five members of the team win their respective individual matches).
 3. Total number of individual wins record.
 4. Total number of points scored during the two round robin team matches.
 5. Team with the least number of hansoku (penalties).
 6. Team with the least tied matches.
 7. Team with the most individual matches won by 2 to 0 points.
 8. Team with the most individual matches won by 2 points to 1 (or team with the least matches won by 1 point to 0).
 9. Team with the most individuals scoring the first point on the opponent.
 10. Team that defeated the most other teams with higher dan-kyu average rank.
 11. Team that scored the most points against teams with higher dan-kyu average rank.
 12. If teams are equal in respects to the first 11 criteria,
 - team managers/captains draw lots to determine which team advances or received the higher seed in the brackets.OR
 - one person selected by each of the tied teams will compete in a three minute, single point, sudden death match. If tied at the end of the three minutes, the match will be decided by hante (judges' decision). This applies only if two teams are tied after the first 11 criteria are considered. If more than two teams are equal, then lots will be drawn.
